INTRODUCTION

Electronic Cargo Tracking Note (ECTN) is required by over 24 countries in West and Central Africa.

Although the procedure and duration of obtaining ECTN vary, the importance of the certificate is even across all countries.

It contains information such as:-

- Nature and commercial value of cargo
- Parties involved in international trade
- Cargo movement between the ports

An ECTN certificate should be prepared as per original bill of lading. A shipper is responsible for obtaining the ECTN certificate. All shipments that do not have a valid ECTN number, cannot be unloaded at the port of destination until a valid ECTN number is issued.

WHY ECTN IS IMPORTANT

- Port authorities of respective African countries claim that the aim of the ECTN is to reduce risk, real-time monitoring and reliable assessments of import goods, their shippers, importers, and other details.
- Many Countries in the African continent require exporters to notify Custom Authorities about the shipment details before they arrive and the Cargo Tracking Note system facilitates this requirement.
- The ECTN certificate, also known as waiver document, allows Marine Custom Authorities access information about exporter/importer, shipping route and methods, type and value of the consignment, the value of freight as well as the details about commodity being carried in their respective countries.
- It is very important for exporters to submit the subject document before the cargo arrives at its final destination.
- The loading document provides security assurance and allows customs authorities to trace the shipment before it arrives at the port of discharge.
- Shipping or arrival without ECTN certificate may result in high fines at the destination port, may cause delay resulting Detention and Demurrage
- Also, through the system, each destination country can maintain statistical data for future logistical monitoring.
